

#2 Pratt Cottage
(Park Place)
Chapel Hill, N.C.
April 8, 1968

Governor Dan K. Moore
Governor's Office
Raleigh, North Carolina

Dear Governor Moore:

Enclosed are close to six hundred signatures on petitions distributed yesterday at a memorial service for Dr. Martin Luther King attended by the townspeople of Chapel Hill-Carrboro. We seek from you and would help support positive action in these troubled times.

Sincerely,

Charles L. Cherry
Charles L. Cherry
(For the signers of the petition)

RECEIVED
APR 10 1968
GOVERNOR'S
OFFICE

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

D. Wayne D...
Copper Johnson
Robert C. Pitt
Margaret M. Pitt
Charles Spencer
W. H. Pittman
Kay Rottenhouse
Gerry Clark
Paul O. Pitt
Edwin L. Brown
Murphy Alexander
Hilma Fletcher

Charlotte Huse
Mason L. Merrill
James H. Walkout
Clarence P. Walkout
Sheila Teng
Mari Loney
Eva L. Bremer

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Catherine F. Smith
Wendy P. Shundor
Janet New
Mark A. Spivey
David S. Krick
Samuel B. Ball
Carl R. Parker
James H. McGraw Jr.
Todd Bric
D.T. Colborn
Ruthann Edwards
M.P. Leon
(Over) Kimball King
Scottow King

Howard Harper Mary C. Hopkins
Edwin Striley Jean Bahnsen
Deborah Strong Mawa Burnette
John D. McSwain Marie Hill
Richard N. Lewis J. Marie Hill
J.W. Whitten
H.D. White
Peter B. Survey
Richard A. King
Susan V. Harris
Mrs. Kay Rose
John N. Wall Jr.
C. Jerry Colby
J. C. Alexander Jr.
Thomas R. Shooker

Mrs. Gloria R. Maedey

Penelope Wilson

Lorraine B., Ed. D.

Elizabeth W. Wilson

John W. Coon

Christopher Wilson

John 99, Nurses

June C. Abbott

Mrs. Davis Caldwell

Mrs. Bette Jones

Molly Nicholson

Len Lopez

Michael Jordan

Betty Jordan

Carenne Parker

Dawn S. Nelson

Anne M. Nelson

Rodney Hoff

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Maine Baldwin
Dr. Leavel D. Bell
Christine S. Bell
Lucy M. Baldwin
McKinley Baldwin
Jeanne Hernandez
Vivie Stayton Ward
R. Dunaway Ward Jr.
Jean Lenski
Gladys Lassiter
Worthy Atwater
Dorothy F. Nickerson
Sister Mary Patrick
Sarah E. Chanford

Robert Heyman
Kenneth J. Reckford
Sara A. Immerwahr
Clara Baldwin
Bessie Holland
Charles D. Wright
Charles L. Cherry

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Matthew V. Sealy
Lynn B. Barnes
David Lamer
J. H. Barnes
Doris M. McAndrew
Andrew M. Scott
Anne F. Scott
Rafael Perez
Bill Swink
Samuel D. Starnes
Roger B. Foushee
Robert Watson Jossie

Sam Henderson
Frank Vandiviere
Billy E. Berry
Alice B. Barnes
David M. Still
Hugh Puble
Linda Jeffries
Paul Delosberry
Shirley Rayland
Linda Textor
Tony P. Roof
Paul K. Wilson
Robert E. Stauffer
Gertrude H. Stauffer

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Peter W. Ulliges
Robert J. Mankin
Gene M. Megan
Gull Elliott Black
Morris S. Davis
R. Austin Dally
W.M. Cromartie
Pamela A. Dornan

Robert G. Kulpstrick
Pamela Kulpstrick
Anita T. Baumgardner
Brenda Sue Shore
Peter J. Hartley
Douglas W. Schaeninger
Joyce M. Schaeninger

Frank A. Hall
Jane L. Hall
Clare Payne
Barry R. Brunett
David G. Stidham

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Doris B. Kaufman Jr.

Gwynn Clegg

Edwari Timberlake

CJ Willows

Jane S. Spruyt

Marie Williams

Stan Heyman

Gladys J. Fikes

Jean C. Leaski

Henry R. Ivenson

Lewis Caldwell

Dorothy F. Nickerson

Joseph B. Field

Gayle Hargraves

Ann Boyd

John D. Johnston

M + Mrs. James R. Oggle

Kenneth L. Davis

S. Regina Murphy

Heather Stevenson

J. Stanley Nathan

Chris Brown

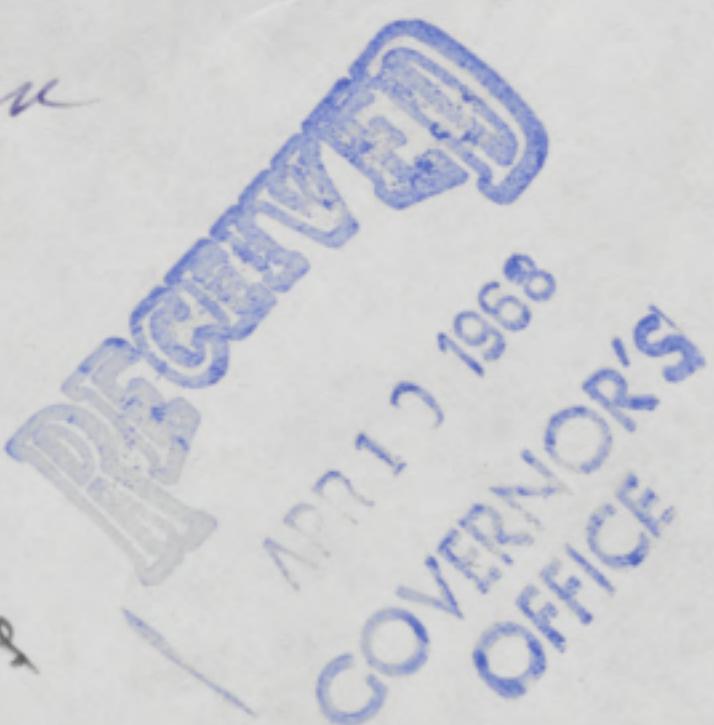

Mrs. Evans Boche

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

F. Curtis
M. B. Curtis
Hjalmar W. Hammeson
Anna B. Hammeson
Nicholas Putnam Dues
Janet R. Suckman
Dane Perry
Bill O'Brien
Alta Blacker
Mary Mace
Lansing M. Present
Bennett M. Coleman
Byron S. Duvall
E. H. Mitchell
Sister Maria Dolahan

Henry R. Watkins
Wayne P. Esser
Nicholas C. Morosoff
Dorothy L. Mayes
Gertrude J. Churing
Willie M. Hall
Charles B. Reed
Suzanne S. Cashwell
Katie Gelston
John R. Gelston
Susan Dixon
Mallie Hargrave
Elaine Hooper
Magdalena Zajicek
Charlotte Register

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Lynda Paul
John D. Burchard
Grady Taylor
Howard Lipton

Michael A. Stepan
Lillian W. Lee
Housewife

D. Allen Gaynor
Lawrie R. Alpp

Shirley B. Bourne

Dave Harrington

J. B. Ballou

Mrs. Vane Baron

Robert H. Ack

David Courtney
M. J. H. Malcolm Awkward

Horst Kessemeier
Lydia Kessemeier
Edward P. Osteen

Pat Gellacher

Patrick J. Gellacher

Peter J. McNamara

Gary R. Suzz

Curtis N. Rhodes, Jr.

Frederick J. Lackie

Jay Glassman

A. Flu Minelle
Police Brown

RECEIVED
APR 19 1968
GOVERNOR'S
OFFICE

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Johanne T. Cummings
Jane C. Adams
And Jones
Juddith Johnson
Laurence Stanley Gilliam
William A. Semrau
William H. Deane
Alexander Meldrum Wall
Charles E. Duck
Sally Stralman
Arthur Pearce
Mary Lynn Field
Howard Lipton
Christopher J. Bell

Roger B. Wells
Carroll Wells
Forrest W. Young
Arathy D. Young
Carl R. Parker
Sister Joane Vassano
Sister Margaret Thomas
Thomas S. Stokes
Kirkwood Stay, Jr.
Sister Tolson
Mr. & Mrs. Colin Loftin
Mrs. Mrs. Carroll Miller
Mr. & Mrs. F. Bates
Mr. & Mrs. Robert E. Phay

RECEIVED
APR 10 1968
GOVERNOR'S
OFFICE

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Marc Hayes
Carol Moore
Mary Johnson
Adria A. Okie
W. Robert Mann
M.C. Young
Gene Peep
Kathie Young
Jan Jorgenson
Edwin Kuehn
J.L. Ferris
John N. Morris, Jr.
Mrs. Mary Jane Burns
Woody Burns
Mrs. Dale Hamley
Dale S. Hamley

Helen L. Wraggart
Eric Longaber (HCU)
May Garrison
Emily Barclay
Rosalie Beasley
James David Ray
Emily A. Cary
Donald Newland
E.T. Cloak Jr.
Jane R. Cloak
Donald T. Broekington
John McDowell
Kay B. Dennison
Steve Redburn
Anne Baker
Walter W. Burns

RECEIVED
APR 10 1968
GOVERNOR'S
OFFICE

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Michael Paull
Raymond H. Petty
Judith Pulley
David M. Howery
Robert Trudeau
Constantino Morales
Mr. & Mrs. William Schenck
Gary Thomas Scott
David W. Colvin
Jo Leumann
Betsy Caudle
William D. Edd
Eileen Gennan

Maryanne Ragett Guerrero
Dr. Daniel Ragett Guerrero
Anne Michael
Frank A. Jones
Harold Radford
Jane B. Sprague
Wallie Hall

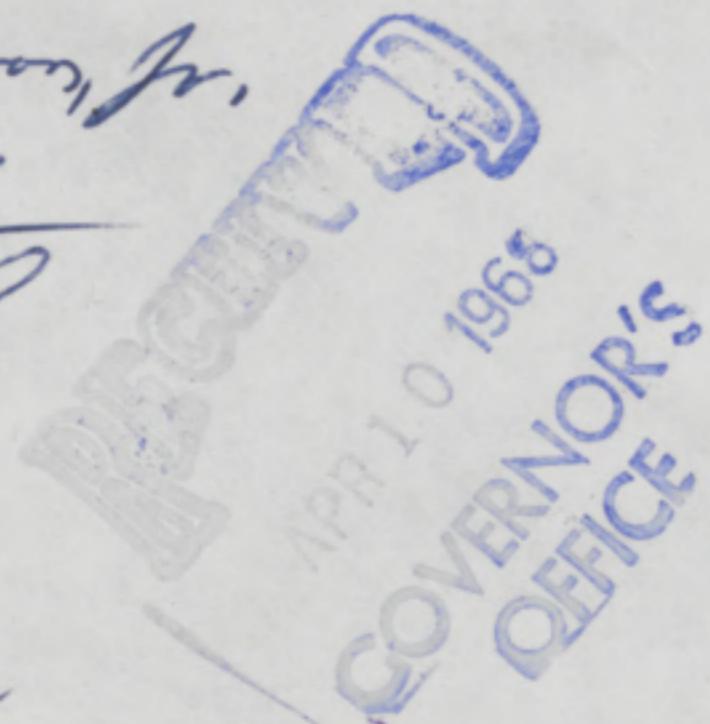

MAILED APR 10 1968 GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

Maie Paull
Richard Hayman
William S. Provost
John A. Jones
Helen K. Jones
Joseph Perris

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Charles G Davis
Juanita L. Jones
Anne Rubin
Karen Filipski
Rodey Redinger
Jackie Day
Guy Peers
Byron Elliott
Lyn Labell
David B Kaufman, Jr.
Ed Lewis
Tom Gaskins
Stan Hyman
Albert S Jones Jr.

T. Christensen
Beverly Humphries
W. C. Jones, Jr.
~~William W. Pennewill~~
~~Janell L. Menerdy~~
Carol G. Bassett
John W. Beaton
Virginia Thomas
John V. Allcott
Janet Green Cottin
Doris Oldham
Caroline L. Feiss
Larry W. Leake
Amy Brosoff

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Dirk J. Sprung
Lester Levine
Nancy Z. Hobis
David Edwards
Sharon Rice Guisinger
Mr. & Mrs. Paul E. Gold
Mr. & Mrs. Stanley Clemens
Mrs. Lucy Briner
W.M. Cuthbert
Linda Fleming
David Shady
Roeght. Gwin
Margaret C Swanton
Ronnie Lynton

Ann T. Glassman
Ethel Rivers
John Rivers
Pollyanna Hester
Emerson Alwater
Mrs. G.R. Manley
Mrs. Francis Barker
Mrs. Bettie Jones
Samuel Jones
Elaine Conise
Jan Cook
Joseph Barber
Merris Mason Jr.
John J. Brown

COVER TO 100
ONE

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Richard P. Hyman
Mary Alice Hyman
Howard Rentholt
Reidell M. Peters
Ana DeNuff Peters
Eunice Atwater
Robert Fawcett
William W. Koegel
Lee J. C. Bennett
Queen Davis
Lola C. Reid
Ayle B. Williams

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Charles Alten Robert J. Gray
Ed Gots Jr. Martha Gray
Michael B. Cauthen William Bembo
David Jacobowitz Wm P Branton
Rebecca Warren Eric Nelson
Burton M. Pollin Weldon Thornton
Geraldine Gourley David Jenkins
Mrs. Gerald Holden Ella Moran
Marianne Cohen Charles Travis
Sylvia Polgar Douglas C. Long
Norma D. Cohen Jane Green Long
P. Wilson Reid
Lisa Wright
Donna S. Fredrickson
Robert S. Fredrickson

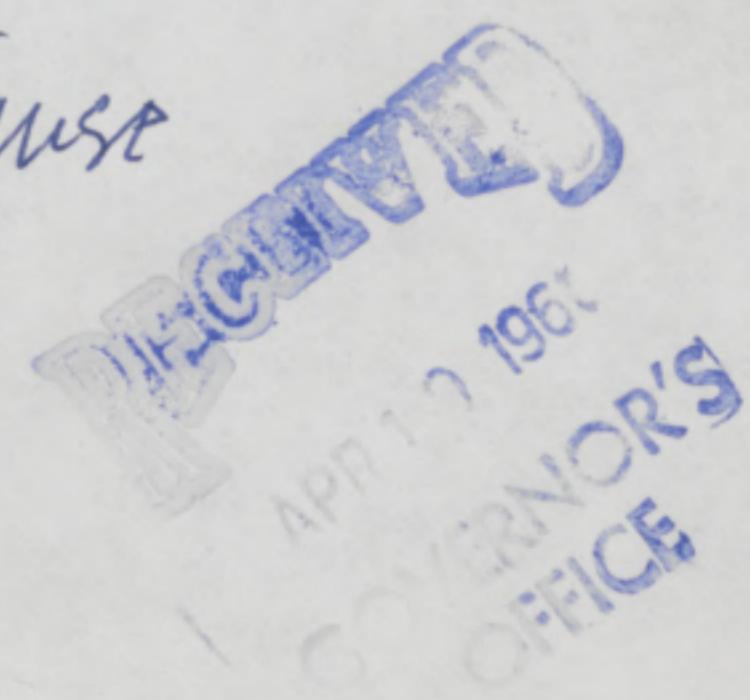

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Sonett Wasserman
Carl E. Koh
Marianne K. Smythe
Robert Baris, Jr.
Susan F. Moore
Marion R. Davis
Frances S. Merrill
Wesley H. Donnelly
Tom Dohmely
Kimball King
Howard Harper

S. Kathryn Sem
Laura Henderson
Matilda Curtis
Earl Siegel
Glossy Siegel
Isaac Tay Jr
Trudy Taylor
Arbed Jarrin
Groppeth hole
David Fere
Stephen Vause

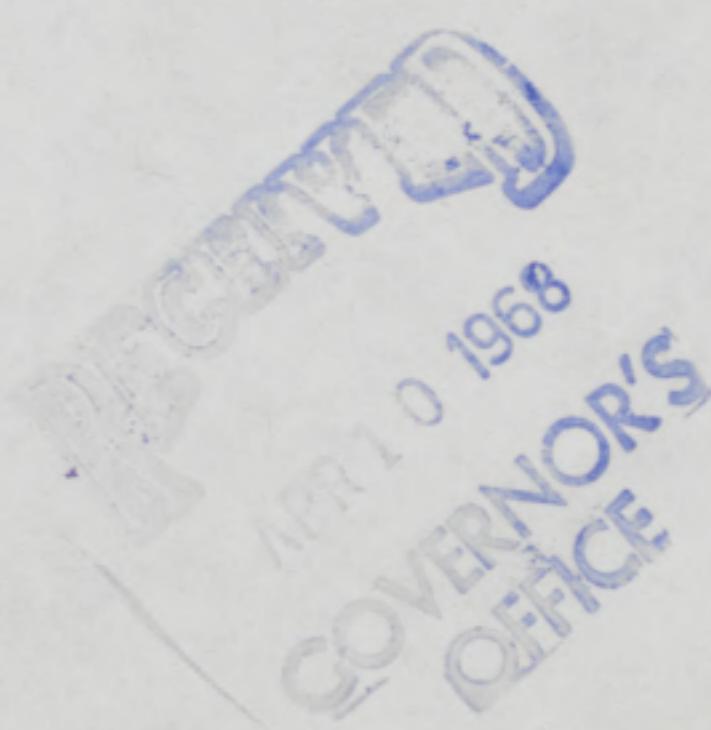

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Albert E. Szymanski
C. Connor Holden
Glen & Karen Elder, Jr.
Eugene F. Mallin
Robert S. Hille
Charles B. Lewis
Janet Wagner
Robert H. Wagner
Kemba & Douglas
Mabel Davis
Frances E. Berry
Peggy T. Lewis
George Carl Lewis
Roger D. Sharpe
Margaret Anne Mudge

Lenora J. King
Priscilla D. McColloch
James A. Whiteley
Recalio Hogan
Stephen Cadmus
William Carter, Jr.
Calvin Edwards
Tommy Jones
Leroy Russel
Agola Anna-Osolo
Ernest J. Simmons

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Judd Sorcek

Donald E. Francisco

Mrs & Mrs James W Prothro

Mrs Lusie Spinks

Mrs. Mildred Baldwin

Mr. Allie Brewer

Mrs Catherine Jane

Mrs Velcie Baller

Mrs Diane Buckley

Pearline Byrdine

D. Huels Gelson

J. S. Lee

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Daryl Powell

Bonnie R. Powell

Corey Stacy

Marie A. Roberts

Mary Alice Beall

Nancy S. Meekemper

Mary T. Carter

Rebecca S. Wright

H. Hardy Adams

David C. Hesser

Jamie E. Bryan

Dawn A. Bryan

Bethan Fox

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Frances A. Campbell
B J Campbell
Emily Dunn

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Donald B. Baug
Ode Mae Foushee

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Benton B. Goldstein, Jr. Willis Barber

Karin D. Howard
Judy Dixon

Typhaine R. Burgess
Mony Rawell Burgess

Janet Ackerson

Dawn Harry
Barbara L. Hippler

Gestrude McMaster

Beatrice A. Edwards
Keford A. Barber

Samuel Garner Vick
Arthur J. Caldwell

Eric L. Brewster

Joyce Bainton Peck
Chris Peck

Steve Peck

Meloir Brond

Caroline Lockett

RECEIVED

APR 10 1968
GOVERNOR'S
OFFICE

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Betsey King

Helen Lancaster

Bill Smith Jr.

Mary Patton Welt

Jenny Meeks

Katherine H. Cayer

David Michael Boyer

Rochelle Stephens

Mary Frances Boyce

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Cheryl Rubinstein
Barbara B. Fordham
Nan C. Sesnow
Stella Gilmore

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

J. A. Deverenx.
Susan J. Williams
Oscar Phillip Cather
Ronald E. Gay

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Virginia Reed

Mary Harris

Suzanne B. Roghelia

Christopher Bohne

Steve Elex

Bruce Page

While words, memorials, and other symbolic gestures are necessary means of expressing sentiment, sentiment itself can do very little either to redeem a death or to alleviate our frustration over the situations which precipitated the death of Dr. Martin Luther King. His death can only be truly mourned and his tragedy can only be given meaning when it changes the conditions of the living. When a man is sacrificed to a cause, that death can be redeemed only if his cause gains new life. Present events make it imperative, both for our own sakes and Dr. King's, that we prove through actions that the principles for which he lived are viable and can produce effective changes in our society. With this in mind, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves and request the Governor of the State of North Carolina to pledge himself to bring about the following goals:

1. To reconvene the state legislature to deal effectively with such questions as open housing, the extension of the federal minimum wage to cover all workers in the state, and the repeal of the right-to-work laws.
2. To deal with urban renewal and welfare complaints.
3. To implement the measures suggested by the Kerner Report.

Elizabeth R. Piesel
Martha S. Kenner
Susan G. Roschy
Doris D. Weir
Barbara A. Lohito
Wayne A. Clark
Janice E. White
Judith E. Blumereich
John C. Wheeler
Thomas R. Konrad

Herman Belahine

April 11, 1968

Mr. Charles L. Cherry
Park Place, #2 Pratt Cottage
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Dear Mr. Cherry:

Thank you for sending me copies of petitions signed by approximately 600 persons during a memorial service for Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

I appreciate having this expression of views with regard to positive action proposed for these difficult days. You may be sure that these ideas will receive most careful consideration.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

Dan Moore

THW:nmj