Dear Gov. Moore:

As Gov. Geo. C. Wallace has told us the Anarchists are given top billing by your officials. Gov. Moore I hold you responsible for the speakers platform given to Stockley Carrick at Chapel Hill. He runs with the pack of destroyers and ^{you} know his record. As Gov. you have the power to abid our children being thrown to these evil people. God help our children! Why do you permit these so-called civil rights agitators at Swan Quarter ?? moving in and leading Trouble Shame

Sincerely,

REPORT!

INSURRECTION CITY

■ ON ASSIGNMENT in the nation's capital for THE REVIEW OF THE NEWS, your reporter spent last week as a ragged resident of Resurrection City, the so-called "City of Hope" on the banks of the Potomac. My editor had sent me to pose as one of the "poor" in order to get a first-hand account of the Poor People's Campaign encamped in the heart of the District of Columbia.

When I arrived, sporting a two-weeks' growth of beard and wearing my oldest clothes, it had been raining steadily for two days. More than 7 inches of rain had fallen in less than a month, and the camp on the once beautiful, tree-lined mall next to the Reflecting Pool of the Lincoln Memorial had become a stinking quagmire of churned, reddish-brown mud. Resurrection City, a revolutionary camp, wallowed in the odor of an open sewer.

Through the filthy canvas partition which formed the door of the tent-shaped hut to which I was assigned, I watched the torrents of rain for hours, hoping for a break in the weather. A chill wind whipped through the cracks of my shanty, one of hundreds designed by professional architects working for the revolutionaries running this show—architect-designed misery, as it were. Although they were fairly warm, the blankets which had been given me upon arrival (to get them I falsely identified myself as a member of the Communist W.E.B. DuBois Clubs and was greeted as a Comrade) were crawling with lice and they were damp from the constant drizzle.

In marked contrast to the magnificent Lincoln Memorial which loomed in the distance, the campsite was an utter shambles. Throughout the large, fenced-in area of the camp, which had been declared off-limits to the police by federal officers, there were heaps of soaked and discarded clothing, children's shoes, under-clothing, trousers, stockings, dresses. Mounds of rotting garbage lay everywhere, covered with flies and maggots. Added to the misery was the stench of human waste which saturated the air whenever a sudden breeze blew through the doorless latrines dotting the encampment. These structures were known as "Johnny on the Spot" by those poor souls who had been conned into this nightmare scene by the revolutionaries behind the Campaign. Entering one of them at night was a nauseating and unforgettable experience. The conditions in this "ghetto" created on the banks of the Potomac by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference were a classic case of instant slum.

Those of us living in Resurrection City endured a monstrous phantas-magoria of degradation and moral decay. While there I witnessed the desecration of historical monuments, the ripping and defiling of American flags, indescribable filth, and a pervading and wanton disregard for law and order as paramilitary revolutionaries from groups calling themselves the Raiders, the Rat Pack, Commandoes, and Blackstone Rangers threatened whites and called for "killing whitey" and "burning down America." What I saw, in fact, was a microcosm of one of the major projects of the Communist Party, U.S.A.—another manifestation of a revolutionary program aimed at the destruction of the United States of America. How do I know it was part of a Communist program? Because I was there. Because I saw the Comrades in action.

I watched as a relatively small group of revolutionaries, led by a hard core of Communists and fellow-travelers, demanded billions of dollars in blackmail from the U.S. Congress and were backed by powerful "Liberals" in government; as they were promoted by powerful "Liberals" in the news media; as they were protected in their violent actions by a Leftist Attorney General. I even left with proof that the "demands" of the Poor People's Campaign were written by the Communist-controlled Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Those running this show know very well what they are doing.

Among those I found working hardest at Resurrection City was an important revolutionary named Myles Horton, President of a Communist training school called the Highlander Research and Education Center. Horton and I talked for many hours about the Comrades' revolutionary project for the "poor," and he even offered me a job helping out in the Highlander Center operated on the campsite. Myles, trained in the Young Communist League in his youth, has devoted a lifetime to the Communist cause. Another Highlander official, Walter Bishop, informed me that the Highlander goal was to "educate the Appalachian poor to overthrow the system." He explained to me that the final plans for the Poor People's Campaign were made at a two-day meeting of the Communist Southern Conference Educational Fund in Atlanta on April 25-26. Those in attendance included such Communists as Carl and Anne Braden and Jack McMichael.

Among those with whom your reporter tramped through the garbage was the "Reverend" Ralph D. Abernathy, successor to Dr. Martin Luther King, and new President of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Ralph is as famous for his perverted sexual escapades as for his affiliation with Communist causes, having once been chased down a metropolitan avenue with a hatchet for perverted sexual activity with a fifteen-year-old girl. He has also cavorted as a Co-Chairman of the National Mobilization Committee, which has been cited by the House Committee on Un-American Activities as being controlled by the Communist Party; he was also the first signer of a petition for executive clemency for Communist Carl Braden after Braden had been convicted of sedition; and, he has been closely linked with the activities of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and the National Committee to Abolish HUAC, two cited Communist fronts. Abernathy, the Director of the Poor People's Campaign, has stated that "cities will burn" if his demands are not met.

The "Reverend" James Bevel, another official of the Communist-controlled Southern Christian Leadership Conference with whom I marched and attended revolutionary training sessions at Resurrection City, was National Director of the Communist National Mobilization Committee during the Reds' Vietnam Week project in 1967. Commenting on the burning of an American flag, Bevel has declared: "I feel no responsibility to a nation-state I don't get too excited when I see a rag on a stick called a flag." He cited the purpose of the Poor People's Campaign as being: "To redistribute the wealth of the U.S. and turn the means of production over to the people To eliminate all armaments All local and state police must be 're-oriented.' . . . To rid the world of all the 'fascists and jitter-bug fascists.'" Reverend Bevel worked with militant Negro gangs in Chicago, where he has an extensive arrest record, and where he trained the O.E.O.-funded Blackstone Rangers in guerrilla tactics.

Another top Revolutionary on the scene was Marxist Barbara Deming, Editor of the Communist-oriented Liberation magazine, who has declared: "Talking to Ho chi Minh is like talking to the man next door he is a man of humor, shrewdness, and a lot of humanity." Barbara Deming and I marched together with the "poor" on assaults on the Department of Agriculture and the State Department. Others with whom I "demonstrated" were Reies Lopez Tijerina, the Castroite leader of the Federation of Free City States, a Marxist outfit formerly called the Federal Alliance of Land Grants; Rudolfo "Corky" Gonzales, who says he favors armed revolution and is head of the Crusade For Justice, funded by the War on Poverty; Richard Romero, another Tijerina lieutenant who made his headquarters in Washington at the Communists' Hawthorne School; and, Bayard Rustin, a convicted sex-pervert, former member of the Young Communist League, and for 12 years an organizer for the Communist Party. Rustin resigned his post as organizer for the Campaign's Solidarity Day March due to a disagreement with that other moralist, the "Reverend" Ralph Abernathy. It seems Rustin didn't want enough "violent nonviolence."

Pillars of the encampment whom I have positively identified included: Communist Carl Bloice of the National Committee of the Communist Party, U.S.A., and a Communist DuBois Club leader; S.C.L.C. Advisor Robert Collier — a disciple of Communist Che Guevara—who was convicted of a plot to blow up the Statue of Liberty, the Washington Monument, and the Liberty Bell; Lee Webb, a former National Secretary of the Marxist Students for a Democratic Society, and an organizer for the Marxist Institute of Policy Studies; William F. Pepper, Executive Secretary of the Communist-dominated National Conference for New Politics, and advisor to S.C.L.C. official Hosea Williams. Williams, the “direct-action leader” of the Campaign, was involved in a nasty mess in October 1965 when a stolen car ring was found to be supplying automobiles to Williams and the S.C.L.C.

Other leaders of the Campaign included Ralph Wheeler, former editor of the Hinds County Newsletter of the subversive Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party; Carl and Anne Braden, Communist organizers in the South and officials of the Communist Southern Conference Educational Fund, who raised money for the Campaign and drew up final plans for the encampment; Nora “Muffy” North, daughter of Communist Joseph North, and correspondent for the Communist Worker; Cleveland Robinson, President of the Negro American Labor Council, cited in the Communists’ Political Affairs as “one of the most important organizations in the country”; and, the entire national staff of the Communist W.E.B. DuBois Clubs, headed by Communist Jarvis Tyner, the DuBois Clubs’ National Chairman.

Yes, the Poor People’s Campaign is very important indeed to the Communists. According to a cable sent to the leaders of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference by Vietcong leader Ho Thu, the Poor People’s Campaign is “an offensive against the ruling circles” in America and will put “more weight behind the demand for an end to the War in Vietnam.” Communists around the world have saluted the work of the Comrades in Washington.

In short, the Poor People’s Campaign has been a project which has been led, manipulated, and operated by the Communists. It has been a major propaganda show for the Reds, subjecting its dupes to misery and filth worse than anything to be found in the ugliest slum in Harlem. I watched and worked with the Communists running the show there. I spent a full day operating the switchboard at Resurrection City, noting the names of the Comrades calling in advice, messages, and directives. I ate, slept, and waded in their stench. If the Communists succeed at what they are trying to do, dear reader, I have seen the future . . . and it is a garbage heap.

Do we, as tax paying citizens of North Carolina, have to put up with the likes of Stokely Carmichael being allowed to speak at our tax supported colleges? There is no questions as to who or what Mr. Carmichael is or as to what his lecture will be on. We are opposed to our tax money being used to support any college that allows such as Stokely Carmichael to indoctrinate our leaders of tomorrow.

We are also opposed to sending our children to an institution which has lowered its standards to allow such as this. We shall never as individuals or groups make any donations to the University of North Carolina or any other college which advocates same. Please understand that our objections are to the character of the individual.
